Strategy

Our interests in urban agriculture led us to renovating our garden a bit. We began by clearing a large proportion of the garden to make room for things to be planted in an ordered manner. We then planned out what we were going to plant and divided the garden into sections with a walkway intersecting the different zones. These images depict what we produced.

Possible expansion of agricultural area

Our food production became quite successful and when it came to picking some of the crops such as rocket and peas we actually had an excess. We distributed the excess amongst our neighbours and began discussing what we had accomplished and they were impressed, we began to tell them about some of the schemes running in Brighton for growers and seemed very interested. This map shows the surrounding houses possible growing areas.

Vegetables currently growing in our garden:

- Radish
- Peas
- Dwarf French Beans
- Mixed Salad (Rocket, Lettuce etc.)
- Potatoes
- Carrots
